

Fingerprint Impression Kit

What does my impression kit include?

- White and blue moulding compound - the number of pots of compound will depend upon your order and the number of prints required.
- Grip seal bags
- A pre paid envelope to return impressions

How do I take the fingerprint impression?

- Ensure the finger is clean and dry
- If taking fingerprint impressions from a baby or young child, it is advisable to capture the impression from their thumb
- Remove the contents of BOTH pots of compound, keeping each colour separate at this stage
- Split each large ball of compound into THREE smaller balls. You should now have THREE white balls and THREE blue balls
- Take ONE white ball and ONE blue ball and mix them together until you have an even coloured blue ball - it is important that there is no marbling. This is now mixed and will start to harden quickly! If the mould starts to set before making the impression, then the fingerprint impression will lack definition
- Roll the freshly mixed ball of compound into a ball
- Place the ball on a small piece of paper, and use a book underneath as support
- Press the chosen finger into the ball. Keep the finger straight and press into the compound without going all the way through (you are looking to capture the detail in the centre of the fingertip, not just the fingertip)
- If you are unhappy with the fingerprint impression, or you do go all the way through the mould, then just start again by rolling it back up into a ball. Please be aware that it may set very quickly now. The impression you see on the mould is the same as to what will be on your jewellery
- Repeat the above with the remaining balls of compound
- Wash hands with soap and warm water to remove any residue from the compound
- Do NOT try to remove the moulds from the paper, as this will distort them. You will need to wait for them to cure
- Leave the moulds to cure. This will take approximately 20 minutes. If you can press your fingernail into the side of the mould without making an indentation, then it is set
- Pop the impressions into the grip seal bags and return to us in the pre paid envelope provided

Please note that we will assess your fingerprint impressions when they arrive with us. In some instances, we will ask you to retake the impressions, if we think a better impression can be captured. Another kit will be sent FREE of charge.
